

Numbers 24:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He hath said, which heard the words of God, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open:

Analysis

Balaam declares himself 'He hath said, which heard the words of God, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open.' This describes genuine prophetic experience—hearing God's words, seeing visions, entering trance states with spiritual eyes open. Yet even authentic prophetic gifting doesn't guarantee righteous character, as Balaam's later wickedness proved (2 Peter 2:15-16, Jude 11, Revelation 2:14).

Historical Context

Balaam was a real prophet who genuinely contacted Yahweh, showing God can use imperfect vessels to speak truth while disapproving their character. This warns against assuming gifting indicates spiritual maturity or divine approval.
