

Numbers 27:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the LORD be not as sheep which have no shepherd.

Analysis

---

Moses prays for a leader 'which may go out before them, and which may go in before them... that the congregation of the LORD be not as sheep which have no shepherd.' Despite God denying Moses entry into Canaan, Moses selflessly seeks Israel's future leadership. The shepherd metaphor emphasizes protective care and guidance - a leader who shares the people's experiences ('go out... go in before them'). This concern reflects Christ, the Good Shepherd (John 10:11) who leads, feeds, and protects His flock. The phrase 'spirits of all flesh' acknowledges God alone knows hearts and can appoint the right leader. Every true shepherd serves under the Chief Shepherd (1 Pet 5:4).

Historical Context

This prayer occurred after God announced Moses wouldn't enter Canaan (v.12-14). Rather than bitterness, Moses demonstrates selfless leadership - concerned for Israel's welfare beyond his own tenure. God appointed Joshua (v.18-23), who had proven faithful as Moses' assistant for forty years. The public commissioning before Eleazar and the congregation ensured smooth leadership transition. This contrasts with pagan monarchies' succession crises and shows God's providential preparation of leaders. Joshua's military skills would prove essential for Canaan's conquest, while his spiritual character ensured covenant faithfulness.

Study Questions

1. Do you pray for your church's future leadership, especially when you won't personally benefit from it?
2. Are you preparing successors in your areas of ministry, or hoarding responsibility out of pride or fear?
