

Numbers 3:50

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Of the firstborn of the children of Israel took he the money; a thousand three hundred and threescore and five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

Analysis

This verse records the final census count of the Levites, demonstrating God's meticulous care in organizing His people for worship and service. The numbering of the Levites represents divine order and accountability within the covenant community. Each Levite was known and counted, reflecting the Reformed principle that God knows and calls each of His elect by name. The precision of this census emphasizes that worship must be conducted according to God's revealed will, not human innovation.

Historical Context

Conducted in the wilderness of Sinai during Israel's second year after the Exodus, this census organized the Levites for tabernacle service. The Levites replaced Israel's firstborn sons as dedicated servants of the sanctuary, a permanent reminder of the Passover when God spared Israel's firstborn while judging Egypt.

Study Questions

1. How does God's detailed organization of worship challenge modern attitudes toward casual or spontaneous worship?
2. What does the Levites' substitution for the firstborn teach us about Christ's substitutionary atonement?
3. In what ways does God's knowledge of each individual Levite reflect His personal knowledge of His people today?
