

Numbers 31:35

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women that had not known man by lying with him.

Analysis

---

And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women that had not known man by lying with him—32,000 virgin females (nashim asher lo yad'u mishkav zakar) sparks difficult ethical questions. Deuteronomy 20:14 permits taking women/children as spoils; adult males were executed (31:7,17) along with non-virgin females (31:17) due to their role in Baal-Peor seduction (Numbers 25).

These captives weren't sex slaves but became integrated into Israel as servants, eventually eligible for covenant membership. The virginity specification prevented bringing idolatrous influence into the camp. Modern readers struggle with this; ancient context shows restrained judgment compared to typical ancient warfare (total annihilation). Still, the passage confronts us with OT holy war's severity, pointing toward Christ who conquers through suffering love, not military force (Revelation 5:5-6).

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern warfare typically killed or enslaved entire populations. Israel's selective preservation of virgins (those uninvolved in Baal-Peor apostasy, Numbers 25:1-9) represented judicial discrimination, not ethnic genocide. Numbers 31:18 specifies 'keep alive for yourselves,' suggesting domestic service, potential marriage (cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-14 regulations), or adoption into tribes.

Study Questions

1. How do we reconcile God's commanded severity in OT holy war with Jesus's enemy-love ethic in the NT?
2. What does the virginity criterion teach about protecting covenant community from corrupting influences?
