

Numbers 31:7

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and they slew all the males.

Analysis

They warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses—The phrase ka'asher tzivah YHWH (כִּי־אָשֶׁר צִוָּה יְהָוָה, just as Yahweh commanded) emphasizes covenantal obedience. This was not ethnic cleansing or imperialism but executing divine judgment and they slew all the males—specifically the military-age males who participated in Baal-Peor (v. 8 specifies five Midianite kings and Balaam).

The totality language reflects ancient Near Eastern warfare hyperbole (compare Joshua's conquests), focusing on military and leadership destruction rather than genocide. Verse 9 shows women and children were spared (though Moses later commanded executing those complicit in idolatry, vv. 14-18). This was targeted justice, not indiscriminate slaughter.

Historical Context

The campaign fulfilled God's command in Numbers 25:17 following the Baal-Peor incident. Archaeological evidence shows Midianites were nomadic traders and raiders; this military strike disrupted their ability to threaten Israel during the conquest. The Midianites survived as a people (Judges 6-8), confirming this was not total annihilation.
