

Numbers 32:26

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead:

Analysis

Our little ones, our wives, our flocks, and all our cattle, shall be there in the cities of Gilead—The strategic plan: families and livestock remain in fortified Gilead cities (בָּעֵרִי הַגִּלְעָד be'arei haGil'ad) while military-age males cross Jordan to fight. The phrase our little ones... wives... flocks... cattle (בָּתָנָנוּ... בָּשָׂרָנוּ... צָאןָנוּ) emphasizes complete dependents remaining in security while warriors fulfill covenant obligations.

This arrangement demonstrates faith—leaving families in frontier territories (vulnerable to Ammonite/Moabite raids) while fighting distant battles westward required trusting God's protection. The New Testament teaches similar principle: 'Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added to you' (Matthew 6:33)—prioritizing covenant responsibilities over family security requires faith that God protects those we entrust to Him.

Historical Context

Gilead's cities (east of Jordan) sat on Israel's frontier, exposed to raids from surrounding nations (Ammon, Moab, desert tribes). Leaving families there while warriors fought in Canaan (potentially 7+ years of conquest, Judges 1:1-36) required extraordinary faith in divine protection. God honored this faith—no record exists of Transjordan families suffering enemy attacks during the conquest period.
