

Numbers 32:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For when they went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them.

Analysis

They went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land (עד-גֶּתֶל אֶשְׁכֹּל וּרְאוּ) —Eshcol means 'cluster,' named for the enormous grape cluster the spies carried back (Numbers 13:23), visual proof of Canaan's richness. Yet seeing God's provision led to opposite conclusions: Joshua/Caleb saw divine bounty; the ten spies saw unconquerable danger. They discouraged the heart of the children of Israel (וַיָּנַזֵּן אֶת-לֵב בְּנֵי-יִשְׂרָאֵל) —the verb means 'to dishearten/frustrate,' causing corporate despair.

Moses' accusation cuts deep: Gad and Reuben's request will produce the same result —that they should not go into the land which the LORD had given them. Individual choice becomes corporate catastrophe. Their cattle-focused pragmatism could infect the entire nation with doubt about conquering Canaan. This reveals how personal decisions in God's people always carry communal consequences. Selfish choices discourage the faithful.

Historical Context

The Eshcol valley lay near Hebron in Judah's hill country (Numbers 13:22-23). The ten spies' evil report (Numbers 13:32) led to national rebellion and divine judgment: that entire generation died in the wilderness except Joshua and Caleb (Numbers 14:29-30).
