

Numbers 33:32

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And they removed from Bene-jaakan, and encamped at Hor-hagidgad.

Analysis

Removed from Bene-jaakan, and encamped at Hor-hagidgad—הַר הַגִּדְגָּד (Hôr haggidgâd, 'cavern of Gidgad' or 'hole of clefts'). Deuteronomy 10:7 calls this Gudgodah, possibly referring to rocky gorges or wadis in the desert terrain.

The geographic precision—cavern (הַר, hôr) suggests a particular gorge—demonstrates that God cares about the specific details of His people's journey. No encampment was accidental; each was divinely ordained. Romans 8:28 applies this principle: 'All things work together for good' because God superintends every step.

Historical Context

The wilderness of Paran and the Arabah region contained numerous rocky wadis that provided some shelter from desert winds. Israel's survival in such inhospitable terrain was a standing miracle of divine preservation.
