

Numbers 33:40

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel.

Analysis

King Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel—This verse references the conflict recorded in 21:1-3, where the Canaanite king attacked Israel and was utterly destroyed. The parenthetical notice here shows that Israel's approach did not go unnoticed by Canaan's inhabitants.

The verb heard (yən̄y, shāma') carries ominous overtones—what Arad heard provoked military action. Yet Israel's victory over Arad (21:3) was an earnest of coming conquest. Just as Rahab 'heard' of Israel's approach and believed (Joshua 2:10-11), so Canaanite kings 'heard' and hardened their hearts. The same gospel message elicits faith or rebellion.

Historical Context

Arad was a Canaanite city-state in the Negev, south of Hebron. Archaeological excavations at Tel Arad have revealed extensive fortifications from this period, confirming the biblical account of a militarily significant settlement guarding Canaan's southern approaches.

Study Questions

1. Why does the itinerary pause to note what king Arad 'heard'—what theological point does this anticipate?
2. How does the Canaanites' response to hearing of Israel's approach contrast with Rahab's response in Joshua 2?
