

Numbers 36:6

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

This is the thing which the LORD doth command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them marry to whom they think best; only to the family of the tribe of their father shall they marry.

Analysis

God addresses the inheritance rights of Zelophehad's daughters, commanding they marry within their father's tribe to preserve tribal inheritance. This supplementary law balances two principles: women's inheritance rights (Num 27:1-11) and tribal land preservation. The phrase 'let them marry to whom they think best' shows God grants freedom within His boundaries - liberty with limits. This case demonstrates Scripture's progressive clarification: earlier revelation (ch 27) is refined by subsequent revelation (ch 36) as new situations arise. The principle applies to Christian freedom: we're free to marry 'only in the Lord' (1 Cor 7:39) - liberty bounded by God's wisdom.

Historical Context

This ruling addressed a unique situation: Zelophehad had no sons, only five daughters (Num 27:1). The earlier judgment gave them inheritance rights - revolutionary for that era. However, if they married outside Manasseh, their land would transfer to other tribes in Jubilee, fragmenting tribal territories. This clarifying law ensured land stayed within tribes while honoring women's property rights. The daughters' willing obedience (v.10-12) demonstrates humble submission to God's wise boundaries.
