

Numbers 5:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And the priest shall bring her near, and set her before the LORD:

Analysis

The priest brings the woman before the Lord, emphasizing that this is not merely a human legal procedure but a divine judgment. Standing before the Lord means entering God's presence where truth cannot be hidden. The woman is brought by the priest, who serves as mediator, prefiguring Christ who brings us before God's throne. The Reformed understanding of divine judgment is that all will ultimately stand before God's throne where every secret will be revealed.

Historical Context

Bringing someone before the Lord meant standing at the tabernacle entrance, in the courtyard where the bronze altar stood. This was sacred space where God's presence dwelt among His people, making oaths and judgments there particularly solemn and binding.
