

Numbers 7:27

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt offering:

Analysis

The burnt offering animals—young bullock, ram, lamb—each represent different aspects of dedication. The young bullock in its prime strength, the ram in its mature leadership, and the lamb in its innocent submission together picture comprehensive consecration. These three together prefigure Christ who brought strength, leadership, and innocent submission to His sacrifice. The Reformed understanding of Christ's person and work encompasses all these attributes—strength to endure, authority to command, and willingness to submit.

Historical Context

The selection of animals without blemish required careful examination. The offerers couldn't bring sick or defective animals; only the best were acceptable to God. This careful selection emphasized that worship required both the best we have and divine acceptance of our offerings.
