

Numbers 7:89

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

And when Moses was gone into the tabernacle of the congregation to speak with him, then he heard the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy seat that was upon the ark of testimony, from between the two cherubims: and he spake unto him.

Analysis

When Moses entered the tabernacle, he heard 'the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy seat that was upon the ark of testimony, from between the two cherubims.' The mercy seat (kapporeth), where atoning blood was sprinkled, became the meeting place between holy God and sinful humanity. God spoke 'from between the cherubims' - guardians of divine holiness. This illustrates that God communicates through atonement. Christ is our mercy seat (Rom 3:25, 'propitiation' translates the same Greek word as 'mercy seat' in Heb 9:5). We hear God's voice through Christ's atoning work, not our own merit. The cherubim's wings overshadowed the mercy seat, picturing how God's holiness and mercy meet at the cross.

Historical Context

This verse concludes the dedication offerings chapter, showing that lavish worship enables communion with God. The specific location - between the cherubim on the mercy seat - recalls God's promise to meet Moses there (Ex 25:22). Unlike pagan shrines where priests spoke for supposedly silent gods, Israel's God actively spoke to His people through His appointed mediator. Moses alone entered the holy place to hear God; others accessed divine communication through Moses. This pattern foreshadows Christ, the unique Mediator through whom God speaks in these last days (Heb 1:1-2).
