

Philemon 1:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Having confidence in thy obedience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.

Analysis

Having confidence in thy obedience I wrote unto thee—πεποιθὼς τῇ ὑπακοῇ σου ἔγραψά σοι (pepoithōs tē hypakoē sou egrapsa soi, trusting your obedience I wrote to you)—πείθω (peithō, trust/be confident) perfect participle indicates settled confidence. ὑπακοή (hypakoē, obedience/compliance) assumes Philemon will do right. This demonstrates leadership wisdom: expressing confidence in people's virtue often produces it (Pygmalion effect). Paul hasn't commanded explicitly (v. 8-9), but confident assumption exerts moral pressure.

Knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say (εἰδὼς ὅτι καὶ ὑπὲρ ἀ λέγω ποιήσεις, eidōs hoti kai hyper ha legō poiēseis)—ὑπὲρ ἀ λέγω (hyper ha legō, beyond what I say) suggests Paul expects Philemon to exceed minimal requirements. Some interpreters see hint toward manumission (freeing Onesimus), though Paul doesn't explicitly demand it. ποιήσεις (poiēseis, you will do) is confident future—Paul presumes Philemon's gracious response, not merely hopes for it.

Historical Context

Ancient rhetoric distinguished letter types: commanding, requesting, commanding. Paul blends them masterfully—appearing to request while assuming compliance. The phrase "more than I say" allows multiple interpretations:

1. forgive completely

2. free Onesimus
3. send Onesimus back to Paul (v. 13-14 suggested Paul's desire).

Ancient hearers would recognize Paul's diplomatic pressure while preserving Philemon's dignity through free choice.

Study Questions

---

1. Do you respond to spiritual appeals by meeting minimum requirements or exceeding expectations?
2. How does expressing confidence in others' obedience and virtue affect their actual behavior?
3. What is God asking you to do "beyond what I say"—exceeding explicit commands through generous love?
