

Philippians 1:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.

Analysis

But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel (οἱ δὲ ἐξ ἀγάπης, εἰδότες ὅτι εἰς ἀπολογίαν τοῦ εὐαγγελίου κεῖμαι, hoi de ex agapēs, eidotes hoti eis apologian tou euangeliou keimai)—Ex agapēs ("from love, out of love") identifies the pure motive contrasting with envy (v. 15) and selfish ambition (v. 16). These preachers know (εἰδότες, eidotes, perfect participle) with settled understanding Paul's divine appointment.

I am set for the defence of the gospel (εἰς ἀπολογίαν τοῦ εὐαγγελίου κεῖμαι, eis apologian tou euangeliou keimai)—keimai ("I am appointed, destined, set in place") suggests divine positioning. Apologian ("defense") is legal terminology; Paul's trial becomes a gospel platform. The loving preachers recognize Paul's imprisonment as strategic, not accidental, and support rather than undermine his mission. Their love produces theological insight into God's sovereignty.

Historical Context

Paul's defense before Caesar (Acts 25:11-12) was a high-stakes platform for gospel proclamation to Rome's highest authorities. Loving Christians recognized this providential opportunity and intensified evangelism to support Paul's mission. Apologia appears in 1 Peter 3:15 ("ready to give an answer") and describes both legal defense and theological explanation—Paul's trial was both.
