

Philippians 1:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

I thank my God upon every remembrance of you,

Analysis

---

I thank my God upon every remembrance of you (Εὐχαριστῶ τῷ Θεῷ μου, Eucharistō tō theō mou)—The verb eucharistō ("I give thanks") begins Paul's thanksgiving section, a standard epistolary feature elevated to profound gratitude. My God expresses intimate personal relationship, not private possession. The phrase upon every remembrance (ἐπὶ πάσῃ τῇ μνείᾳ, epi pasē tē mneia) could mean "every time I remember you" or "in all my remembrance of you."

Philippians is Paul's most affectionate letter, written to his first European congregation and most faithful financial supporters (4:15-16). Unlike Galatians (no thanksgiving) or Corinthians (qualified thanks), this opening radiates warm pastoral love. Thanksgiving pervades Philippians—eucharistō family words appear throughout despite Paul's imprisonment.

Historical Context

Ancient letters typically opened with thanksgiving to the gods or health wishes. Paul Christianizes this convention, directing thanks to the one true God for spiritual realities rather than material prosperity. The Philippian church, begun with Lydia's conversion and the jailer's household (Acts 16), remained Paul's most stable, generous congregation through decades of ministry.
