

Proverbs 1:25

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof:

Analysis

Wisdom's indictment: 'But ye have set at nought all my counsel, and would none of my reproof.' 'Set at nought' (Hebrew: para, reject, ignore) indicates willful disregard. The comprehensive 'all my counsel' shows total rejection, not merely selective listening. 'Would none' emphasizes volitional refusal—they could have received correction but chose not to. This describes the natural man's hostility to divine wisdom (1 Cor. 2:14). Apart from grace, humans reject God's counsel, preferring autonomous wisdom.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern wisdom traditions valued counsel and reproof from sages and elders. Proverbs repeatedly emphasizes receiving instruction and correction. Rejecting wise counsel was considered foolish and dangerous. Solomon's indictment assumes hearers had access to truth but spurned it. This pattern recurs in prophetic literature—Israel had God's law but disobeyed. Judgment follows rejected counsel.

Study Questions

1. How does the comprehensive rejection of 'all counsel' demonstrate total depravity's extent—not partial but complete resistance to God's truth?
2. What does refusal of reproof teach us about pride being the root of rejecting correction?
