

Proverbs 10:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The blessing of the LORD, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it.

Analysis

The LORD's blessing alone produces true wealth, unaccompanied by the sorrow that attends ill-gotten or idolized riches. This verse grounds prosperity theology in proper perspective—God may grant material blessing, but it comes as gracious gift, not earned wage. Riches with sorrow include wealth gained through sin or that becomes a snare.

Historical Context

Solomon witnessed both blessed prosperity (when Israel walked with God) and cursed abundance (when riches led to idolatry). His father David similarly experienced God's provision without the anxiety of self-dependent striving.
