

Proverbs 10:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The wise in heart will receive commandments: but a prating fool shall fall.

Analysis

The wise in heart will receive commandments, but a prating fool shall fall. The wise eagerly receive authoritative instruction, while the talkative fool who loves hearing himself speak will come to ruin. The contrast between receiving and prating emphasizes listening versus speaking. Those who talk more than listen miss instruction and fall into error. Wise humility receives correction; foolish pride dispenses opinions.

Historical Context

Reflects oral culture where receiving instruction through listening was primary educational method. Fools who talked constantly rather than listening carefully failed to acquire wisdom.
