

Proverbs 11:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The wicked worketh a deceitful work: but to him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward.

Analysis

The wicked works a deceitful work, but to him that sows righteousness shall be a sure reward. Wicked labor is deceitful (sheqer - false, illusory) - appearing profitable but ultimately empty. Sowing righteousness brings certain (emet - true, faithful) reward. The agricultural metaphor emphasizes both effort (sowing) and harvest (reward). Righteousness may require patient cultivation, but the harvest is guaranteed.

Historical Context

Agricultural imagery pervaded wisdom literature in agrarian society. The principle that sowing determines harvest was self-evident and applied to moral life - sow righteousness, reap blessing.
