

Proverbs 13:22

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children:
and the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.

Analysis

---

A good man leaves an inheritance to his children's children, but the sinner's wealth is laid up for the just. Righteous persons build generational wealth blessing grandchildren. Sinners accumulate wealth that ultimately transfers to the righteous. This verse encourages long-term perspective - building legacy extending beyond one's lifetime. It also promises redistribution - wickedly gained wealth eventually reaches righteous hands through divine providence.

Historical Context

Reflects biblical pattern where wicked persons' wealth transfers to the righteous (think Exodus, where Egypt's wealth came to Israel). Covenant theology promised generational blessing for faithfulness.
