

Proverbs 14:31

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He that oppresseth the poor reproacheth his Maker: but he that honoureth him hath mercy on the poor.

Analysis

Oppressing the poor insults their Creator, while honoring Him requires mercy to the needy. This grounds social justice in theology—the imago Dei demands dignity for all humans regardless of socioeconomic status. Generosity toward the poor demonstrates reverence for God who made them.

Historical Context

Israel's laws protected the poor, widow, orphan, and stranger, reflecting God's concern for vulnerable populations. Prophets condemned oppression as covenant violation, not mere social injustice.
