

Proverbs 16:23

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The heart of the wise teacheth his mouth, and addeth learning to his lips.

Analysis

The heart of the wise teacheth his mouth, and addeth learning to his lips. Lev chakham yaskil pihu, לב חכם ישכיל פיהו (the heart of the wise teaches his mouth). The wise person's heart instructs their speech. Ve'al-sefataiv yosif leqach על-שפתיו לפיה, and to his lips adds persuasiveness). Wisdom from the heart produces effective, persuasive speech. The proverb teaches inside-out transformation—wise hearts produce wise words. Jesus taught that the mouth speaks from the heart's overflow (Luke 6:45). Transformed hearts produce transformed speech.

Historical Context

Ancient wisdom emphasized heart-to-mouth connection. Rote memorization without heart transformation produced empty words. True wisdom began in the heart (fear of the LORD) and flowed naturally into speech. Jeremiah contrasted superficial words with heart circumcision (Jeremiah 4:4, 9:25-26). Jesus condemned Pharisees' heart problem manifesting in hypocritical speech (Matthew 15:7-9, 23:25-28). Paul taught that faith comes from the heart and confession from the mouth (Romans 10:9-10).
