

Proverbs 16:9

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

A man's heart deviseth his way: but the LORD directeth his steps.

Analysis

---

This verse articulates the Reformed doctrine of divine providence and sovereignty over human agency. While man possesses genuine moral agency to plan ('deviseth' from Hebrew 'chashab'), God exercises ultimate governance over outcomes ('directeth' from 'kun', to establish). This is not fatalism but acknowledgment that God's decree works through human volition. The verse provides comfort: our plans matter, yet God ensures His purposes prevail. It balances human responsibility with divine sovereignty, a tension Scripture maintains throughout (Philippians 2:12-13).

Historical Context

This proverb belongs to Solomon's collection addressing kingship and governance (Proverbs 16:1-33). In the ancient Near East, where human rulers claimed absolute power, this wisdom reminds even kings that Yahweh alone directs history's course.
