

Proverbs 17:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

A gift is as a precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it:
whithersoever it turneth, it prospereth.

Analysis

A bribe is called a 'precious stone'—valuable and attractive to its possessor. 'Whithersoever it turneth, it prospereth' describes the bribe's apparent effectiveness in accomplishing its giver's purposes. This is not endorsement but observation: bribes work in fallen systems. However, other proverbs condemn bribery (17:23, 15:27). Reformed theology recognizes corruption as a fruit of total depravity. This verse warns that in a sinful world, bribery appears successful, making it tempting. Yet God's law forbids it, and His justice will ultimately prevail over corruption.

Historical Context

Bribery perverted justice in ancient courts. Mosaic law explicitly forbade judges from taking bribes (Exodus 23:8, Deuteronomy 16:19), recognizing that bribes 'blind the eyes of the wise and pervert the words of the righteous.'
