

Proverbs 19:27

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge.

Analysis

This is a straightforward warning against false teaching. To 'cease...to hear instruction' is to close one's ears to wisdom—a catastrophic decision with inevitable consequences. The result is 'erring from the words of knowledge,' a progressive wandering that leads further into error and folly. Truth requires continual attention and receptivity; the moment we stop listening, we begin drifting. This applies both to Scripture itself and to faithful biblical teaching. In an age of competing voices, the call to remain steadfast in sound doctrine is crucial. Apostasy rarely happens suddenly but through gradual neglect of truth and absorption of error.

Historical Context

Israel's prophets constantly warned against false teachers and idolatrous influences from surrounding nations. Remaining faithful to Yahweh's revelation required vigilant attention to His word.
