

Proverbs 2:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

To deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that speaketh froward things;

Analysis

Wisdom delivers from the way of evil, from men speaking perverse (tahpukot - twisted, distorted) things. Moral discernment protects from both evil conduct and corrupting influences. The verse emphasizes both active sin and deceptive teaching as dangers wisdom guards against. Understanding truth enables recognition of error; knowing righteousness enables identification of evil. This protective function demonstrates wisdom's practical necessity, not merely academic interest.

Historical Context

Reflects covenant community where false prophets and wicked counselors could lead Israel astray. Wisdom tradition equipped believers to discern truth from error, protecting covenant faithfulness.
