

Proverbs 2:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

If thou seekest her as silver, and searchest for her as for hid treasures;

Analysis

The mining metaphor illustrates the strenuous effort required to obtain wisdom. Silver mining in ancient times demanded dangerous, exhausting labor with no guaranteed reward. Yet the Reformed perspective maintains that even this diligent seeking is enabled by God's grace, not meritorious in itself. The treasure found is God's gift.

Historical Context

Solomon controlled extensive mining operations (1 Kings 9:26-28, 10:22), making this metaphor vivid to his audience. The Phoenician partnership in mining ventures was well-known, requiring sophisticated technology and significant investment.
