

Proverbs 2:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God.

Analysis

The 'fear of the LORD' is not servile terror but reverential awe that acknowledges His holiness and our dependence. This fear is the epistemological foundation for all true knowledge—without it, wisdom is impossible. Finding 'knowledge of God' is the ultimate goal, surpassing mere moral improvement or practical success.

Historical Context

Unlike pagan wisdom literature focused on pragmatic success, Israel's wisdom was covenantal and theocentric. Knowledge of God meant intimate relationship within the covenant framework, not mere theological facts.
