

Proverbs 2:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of his saints.

Analysis

God's protective continuation: 'He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of his saints.' The double emphasis—'keepeth' and 'preserveth'—shows comprehensive divine care. 'Paths of judgment' represents righteous living; God guards the way of justice. 'His saints' (Hebrew: chasidim, loyal ones, covenant-keepers) identifies the objects of preservation. This teaches perseverance of the saints: God doesn't merely start His people on the path but keeps them in it. Divine preservation, not human determination, ensures believers reach glory.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern travel involved dangerous paths where bandits lurked and wild animals threatened. Path-keeping represented crucial protection for survival. The covenant concept of God as shepherd/guardian of His people's journey appears throughout Scripture. 'Saints' in Old Testament context referred to covenant faithful, not moral perfection. God's preservation of Israel through history demonstrated this keeping despite enemies and obstacles.

Study Questions

1. How does God's keeping of paths demonstrate the doctrine of perseverance—divine preservation rather than human achievement?
2. What does God's preservation of 'his saints' teach us about security belonging to covenant relationship, not personal merit?
