

Proverbs 22:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

He that soweth iniquity shall reap vanity: and the rod of his anger shall fail.

Analysis

He who sows 'iniquity' reaps 'vanity' (Hebrew 'awen'—trouble, sorrow), and 'the rod of his anger shall fail.' The sowing-reaping metaphor appears throughout Scripture (Galatians 6:7-8). Injustice produces its own punishment—trouble and emptiness, not the prosperity the wicked expect. The 'rod of his anger' (instrument of oppression) will be broken. Reformed theology affirms God's justice: the wicked's schemes ultimately fail. This is both encouragement for the oppressed and warning for oppressors. God will not be mocked; what we sow, we reap.

Historical Context

Ancient agricultural metaphors were immediately understood. Just as bad seed yielded poor harvests, so wicked actions produced disastrous consequences, both in this life and eternally.
