

Proverbs 23:18

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

For surely there is an end; and thine expectation shall not be cut off.

Analysis

The promise 'surely there is an end' (or 'surely there is a future') assures believers that God's purposes will prevail. Current circumstances aren't ultimate; hope ('expectation') will be fulfilled. This provides antidote to envy (v. 17) by establishing certainty of future vindication. The wicked's prosperity is temporary; the righteous's reward is certain. God will complete His purposes; believers' hope will not be 'cut off' (disappointed). This doesn't promise earthly prosperity but eternal blessing. The 'end' encompasses both earthly vindication and eternal glory. Believers can endure present hardship by faith that God's promises are sure. Our expectation is not in vain; Christ will return and make all things right.

Historical Context

Israel's prophets repeatedly assured the suffering remnant of coming vindication and restoration. The exile would end; the Messiah would come; God's kingdom would triumph.
