

Proverbs 23:24

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

The father of the righteous shall greatly rejoice: and he that begetteth a wise child shall have joy of him.

Analysis

This proverb parallels verse 15, emphasizing parental joy in righteous children. 'The father of the righteous shall greatly rejoice' (אֲבִי צַדִּיק יִגִּיל/gil yagil avi tsaddiq, greatly rejoice will the father of a righteous one) uses intensive verb form indicating exuberant joy. 'He that begetteth a wise child' (וְיֹולֵד חָכָם/veyoled chakham, one who fathers a wise son) provides the parallel cause. 'Shall have joy of him' (וְיִשְׂמַח בוֹ/yismach-bo, will rejoice in him) indicates ongoing satisfaction. This reverses Proverbs 10:1: 'a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother.' The contrast is stark—wisdom brings joy; folly brings grief. This motivates both parents (to teach wisdom) and children (to pursue it). Ultimately, this points to God's joy in His children. He rejoices over believers 'with singing' (Zephaniah 3:17). Our sanctification brings Him glory (John 15:8).

Historical Context

Proverbs repeatedly addresses parent-child dynamics, reflecting family's central role in ancient Israel. Family wasn't merely a social unit but the primary means of transmitting faith, values, and covenant identity across generations. The Shema commanded: 'these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children' (Deuteronomy 6:6-7). Generational faithfulness ensured covenant blessing; generational apostasy brought judgment (Exodus 20:5-6). The exile resulted partly from failed parental instruction (Judges 2:10). Post-exile Israel emphasized family education, developing practices that became Judaism's foundation. In the early church, parents were commanded to 'bring up [children] in the nurture and admonition of the Lord' (Ephesians 6:4). Family discipleship remained central to faith transmission.
