

Proverbs 23:3

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Be not desirous of his dainties: for they are deceitful meat.

Analysis

Don't desire the ruler's 'dainties: for they are deceitful meat.' The Hebrew 'matam' (dainties/delicacies) and 'lechem kazab' (bread/food of lies) warn that luxurious food from rulers may have strings attached. This isn't about the food itself but about obligations created by accepting favors from the powerful. Reformed theology warns against being bought by worldly benefits. Esau sold his birthright for stew (Genesis 25:29-34). We must not trade spiritual integrity for temporary pleasures or advantages.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern hospitality created obligations. Accepting a ruler's feast implied alliance or submission. 'Deceitful meat' refers to food that appears generous but comes with hidden costs or manipulations.
