

Proverbs 23:4

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Labour not to be rich: cease from thine own wisdom.

Analysis

The prohibition against laboring to be rich warns against making wealth life's primary goal. Cease from one's own wisdom means recognizing the futility of self-dependent striving for security. This doesn't condemn honest work but idolatrous pursuit of riches that displaces trust in God's provision.

Historical Context

Solomon's wealth (and later loss of focus) illustrated this principle. The Teacher in Ecclesiastes similarly concluded that laboring for wealth was vanity and vexation of spirit.
