

Proverbs 25:20

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

As he that taketh away a garment in cold weather, and as vinegar upon nitre, so is he that singeth songs to an heavy heart.

Analysis

Singing songs to a heavy heart is like taking away garments in cold or vinegar on soda. The Hebrew 'shir shiyr' (sing songs) to 'lev ra' (evil/sad heart) creates dissonance. The imagery: removing warmth when cold, adding acid to alkali (creating harsh reaction). Inappropriate cheerfulness to someone grieving is insensitive. Wisdom requires matching response to situation. Romans 12:15 commands: 'Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.' Empathy, not forced cheerfulness, comforts the suffering.

Historical Context

Job's friends initially demonstrated wisdom: 'They sat down with him upon the ground seven days and seven nights, and none spake a word unto him: for they saw that his grief was very great' (Job 2:13). Their folly began when they offered theological explanations instead of empathetic presence. Jesus wept with those who mourned (John 11:35). Ecclesiastes 3:4 recognizes 'a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance.'
