

Proverbs 25:21

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink:

Analysis

This proverb commands enemy-love: 'If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink.' Rather than revenge or indifference toward enemies, provide for their basic needs. Verse 22 adds motivation: 'For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the LORD shall reward thee.' The 'coals of fire' likely represents shame that may lead to repentance—kindness to enemies exposes their wickedness and may soften their hearts. God promises reward for such love. Paul quotes this passage in Romans 12:20-21, teaching Christians to overcome evil with good. This radical ethic anticipates Jesus' command to love enemies (Matthew 5:44).

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern cultures operated on honor-shame and revenge principles—returning evil for evil maintained honor. Against this, both Old Testament law (Exodus 23:4-5) and wisdom taught enemy-love. This countercultural ethic distinguished Israel's covenant morality from surrounding nations' honor codes. Christianity continued and intensified this teaching, with Jesus exemplifying enemy-love on the cross.

Study Questions

1. Who are your enemies, and how can you practically show them kindness rather than seeking revenge or maintaining distance?
2. How does enemy-love demonstrate God's character and advance the gospel more effectively than revenge?
