

Proverbs 28:12

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When righteous men do rejoice, there is great glory: but when the wicked rise, a man is hidden.

Analysis

When righteous men do rejoice, there is great glory—The triumph of the tsaddiqim (righteous) brings rab tif'arah (abundant glory, splendor). Public celebration follows covenant faithfulness; the community flourishes when justice prevails.

The antithesis is ominous: when the wicked rise, a man is hidden. When the resha'im (wicked) ascend to power, yechupas adam (a man is searched out/hidden). The righteous go into hiding, concealing themselves from oppression. This pattern repeats throughout history—Elijah fleeing Jezebel (1 Kings 19), David hiding from Saul, believers during persecution. Proverbs 28:28 parallels: 'When the wicked rise, men hide themselves: but when they perish, the righteous increase.'

Historical Context

Israel experienced this cycle repeatedly: righteous kings like Hezekiah and Josiah brought reformation and rejoicing, while wicked rulers like Manasseh and Ahab drove the faithful underground. The book of Judges shows this pattern (oppression under wickedness, deliverance through righteous judges). Revelation 11:10 depicts the wicked rejoicing when God's witnesses are killed.
