

Proverbs 29:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

When the wicked are multiplied, transgression increaseth: but the righteous shall see their fall.

Analysis

When the wicked are multiplied, transgression increaseth (בְּרִבּוּת רָשָׁעִים יִרְבֶּה) —as the wicked (resha'im) increase in number or influence, rebellion (pesha) multiplies. Sin is social and exponential—wickedness emboldens wickedness. When moral restraint is removed, transgression metastasizes.

But the righteous shall see their fall (וְיִצְדִּיקִים בְּמַפֹּלְתָם יֵרְאוּ) —yet the righteous (tzadiqim) will witness their downfall (bemapaltam, their ruin/collapse). This isn't vengeful gloating but vindication of God's moral order. Psalm 37:34-38 similarly promises the righteous will see the wicked's end. History confirms that empires built on wickedness collapse; tyrannies fall. The righteous witness God's justice enacted in time.

Historical Context

Israel repeatedly cycled through periods of apostasy and judgment (Judges cycle). When wicked kings or foreign powers dominated, transgression increased—temple prostitution, child sacrifice, injustice. Yet prophets promised coming reversal. The exile demonstrated this principle massively—Babylonian wickedness ascendant, then destroyed by Persia. The righteous remnant witnessed God's faithfulness.
