

Proverbs 29:17

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest; yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul.

Analysis

Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest (יָסַר בְּנֶךָ וַיְנַיְחֶךָ)—the imperative yaser means discipline, chasten, correct. The result is rest (vinicheka)—peace, quietness, relief from anxiety. An undisciplined child produces parental turmoil; a corrected child brings tranquility. Yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul (וַיִּתֵּן לְנַפְשְׁךָ מְעֻדִּים)—he will provide delights (ma'adanim, pleasures, dainties) to your soul.

This reverses verse 15's shame. Faithful discipline yields multi-generational blessing—the joy of seeing children walk in wisdom. John echoed this: 'I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth' (3 John 1:4). The investment of correction produces the harvest of delight. Conversely, Eli's failure to correct his sons resulted in catastrophic grief (1 Samuel 4).

Historical Context

Israelite parenting viewed child-rearing as covenant responsibility—raising the next generation to fear YHWH and walk in Torah. Parental authority was backed by community and religious expectation. The proverb promises that faithful correction, though difficult, produces both social stability (rest) and personal satisfaction (delight) for parents.
