

Proverbs 29:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

A man that flattereth his neighbour spreadeth a net for his feet.

Analysis

---

One who flatters his neighbor 'spreadeth a net for his feet.' The Hebrew 'chalaq' (flatter/make smooth) is deceptive speech. Flattery appears kind but is actually a trap ('reshet'—net). Flatterers manipulate through false praise to gain advantage or lead victims into foolish decisions. Reformed theology condemns flattery as form of lying. Genuine friends speak truth, even when difficult (27:6). Flatterers prioritize selfish gain over neighbor's welfare. This verse warns us both to avoid flattering others and to recognize when we're being flattered.

Historical Context

Ancient courts were filled with flatterers seeking royal favor. Absalom used flattery to steal hearts from David (2 Samuel 15:2-6). Flattery was recognized as dangerous manipulation disguised as friendship.

Study Questions

1. Do you flatter others to gain advantage, or do you speak honest, edifying truth?
2. Can you recognize when others are flattering you rather than genuinely commending you?
3. How can you cultivate relationships characterized by honest encouragement rather than manipulative flattery?
