

Proverbs 29:8

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Scornful men bring a city into a snare: but wise men turn away wrath.

Analysis

Scornful men bring a city into a snare—(אֲקָשִׁי לְצִוָּה יָפִיכָו קְרִיחָה) —the Hebrew latzôn (scorn/mockery) describes those who reject wisdom with cynical contempt. The verb yapichu means 'to blow into flame' or 'kindle'—scoffers inflame social discord, turning cities into traps (môqêš) of violence and chaos. These are demagogues who weaponize cynicism.

Conversely, wise men turn away wrath—(חֲכָמִים יְשִׁיבּו אֶפֶּן) —chakamim (the wise) literally 'turn back' (yashibu) anger. Wisdom de-escalates; scorn inflames. Proverbs repeatedly warns against 'scorners' (Proverbs 1:22, 9:7-8, 13:1) as those impervious to correction and destructive to community.

Historical Context

Ancient Near Eastern cities required social cohesion for survival against external threats and internal disorder. Scoffers who undermined authority and sowed discord were genuine threats to civic stability. Solomon's concern for wise governance made identifying and restraining scornful influences a matter of political wisdom.
