

Proverbs 30:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Every word of God is pure: he is a shield unto them that put their trust in him.

Analysis

Every word of God is 'pure' (Hebrew 'tsaraph'—refined, tested); He is a shield to those who trust Him. This verse transitions from questions (verse 4) to affirmation of Scripture's perfection and God's protection. The word 'tsaraph' refers to refined metal—God's Word has been tested and proven completely pure. Reformed theology's doctrine of Scripture's inerrancy and sufficiency flows from this. God's Word is flawless and fully trustworthy. Those who trust ('chasah'—take refuge) find Him a shield (Psalm 18:30).

Historical Context

The refining metaphor connects to ancient metallurgy—tested silver or gold contained no impurities. Similarly, God's Word withstands all testing and proves completely reliable and without error.

Study Questions

---

1. Do you trust Scripture as completely pure and reliable in all it affirms?

2. How has God's Word proven itself a shield in your life?
3. What does it mean practically to take refuge in God and His Word?
