

Proverbs 31:16

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

She considereth a field, and buyeth it: with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard.

Analysis

---

She considereth a field, and buyeth it—The Hebrew zamam (זָמַם, to consider/plan) implies careful deliberation, not impulsive acquisition. With the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard (מִפְּרִי קַפֶּהָ נָטְעָה כֶּרֶם, mipri kappeha nat'ah karem)—she funds the purchase from her own earnings (pri, פֶּרִי, fruit), demonstrating both independent economic agency and long-term investment wisdom. Vineyards took years to mature, requiring patient capital allocation.

This shatters reductionist readings that confine women to narrow domestic roles. The eshet chayil is a real estate investor, agricultural entrepreneur, and strategic planner. Her economic activity flows from covenant stewardship—managing creation's resources for generational blessing. This anticipates believers as co-heirs with Christ, stewarding His kingdom resources (Romans 8:17). Godly dominion (Genesis 1:28) includes women's full economic participation.

Historical Context

Women in ancient Israel could own property and engage in commerce (though legal systems varied). Archaeological evidence shows women as merchants, artisans, and landowners. This verse reflects actual economic practice, not mere idealization. Vineyard investment was culturally significant—wine for covenant meals, trade, and joy (Psalm 104:15).

Study Questions

1. How does this verse challenge cultural assumptions about women's economic roles—does biblical wisdom support female entrepreneurship and investment?
2. What does 'considering a field' (careful due diligence) teach about stewardship decisions—are you investing resources with prayerful wisdom?
3. How does planting a vineyard (long-term investment requiring patience) counter contemporary consumerism and short-term thinking?
