

Proverbs 6:32

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

But whoso committeth adultery with a woman lacketh understanding: he that doeth it destroyeth his own soul.

Analysis

Adultery destroys the soul—not merely social reputation but one's deepest being. The Hebrew 'nephesh' (soul) encompasses the whole person in relationship with God. Sexual sin violates God's image, covenant fidelity, and one's own integrity, leaving spiritual devastation requiring God's redeeming grace.

Historical Context

Mosaic law prescribed death for adultery (Leviticus 20:10), showing its covenant-breaking severity. Though civil penalties changed, the spiritual and relational destruction remains constant across ages.
