

Psalm 103:13

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Like as a father pitith his children, so the LORD pitith them that fear him.

Analysis

God's fatherly compassion toward those who fear Him provides intimate, relational context for mercy. The Hebrew 'pitith' (racham) shares a root with 'womb,' suggesting motherly tenderness. This parental imagery grounds theology in relationship, not mere legal transaction. The Reformed understanding of adoption recognizes that believers aren't merely pardoned criminals but become God's beloved children. Christ taught us to pray 'Our Father' (Matt 6:9), establishing this intimate relationship as central to the gospel.

Historical Context

In ancient patriarchal society, a father's compassion toward his children was expected and valued. David, an imperfect earthly father, understood both human and divine fatherhood. His own failures as a father perhaps deepened his appreciation for God's perfect fatherly compassion.
