

Psalm 104:28

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

That thou givest them they gather: thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good.

Analysis

What God gives, creatures gather; when He opens His hand, they are filled with good. This emphasizes both divine sovereignty (God gives) and creaturely agency (they gather). God's provision requires responsive action—creatures must gather what God supplies. 'Open thy hand' suggests generous abundance, not grudging provision. Being 'filled with good' (tob) shows God gives quality provision, not mere subsistence. Christ taught that the Father gives good gifts (Matt 7:11). The Reformed balance of divine sovereignty and human responsibility appears here—God provides, creatures respond.

Historical Context

The imagery of God opening His hand appears elsewhere (Ps 145:16), suggesting a generous provider freely distributing abundance. This contrasts with tight-fisted hoarding.
