

Psalms 104:5

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Who laid the foundations of the earth, that it should not be removed for ever.

Analysis

God 'laid the foundations of the earth' so firmly 'it should not be removed for ever.' This speaks to creation's stability and order, grounded in God's sovereign establishment. The Hebrew kun (established) suggests intentional, permanent placement. While the earth will ultimately be renewed (2 Pet 3:13, Rev 21:1), God's original creative work demonstrates His power and reliability. Christ, through whom all things were created (Col 1:16), sustains creation by His powerful word (Heb 1:3). The Reformed doctrine of providence recognizes God's ongoing sustaining of creation.

Historical Context

Ancient creation myths featured chaotic, unstable worlds. Israel's understanding of an earth firmly established by God demonstrated the Creator's superior power and intentional design compared to pagan deities.
