

Psalms 105:38

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Egypt was glad when they departed: for the fear of them fell upon them.

Analysis

This verse reveals Egypt's perspective on Israel's departure. 'Egypt was glad' shows the reversal: the oppressor nation rejoiced to see the oppressed leave. 'The fear of them fell upon them' explains why—God had placed supernatural dread of Israel upon the Egyptians. This phrase uses pachad (פָּחַד), meaning terror or dread. This fulfilled God's promise to send fear before Israel (Exodus 23:27). The nation that once enslaved Israel now feared them, demonstrating God's ability to change hearts and circumstances for His redemptive purposes. This fear was justified—Egypt's firstborn were dead, their economy devastated, their gods shown powerless.

Historical Context

The psychological impact of the plagues broke Egyptian will to resist. The nation that had drowned Hebrew babies (Exodus 1:22) now begged them to leave, even enriching them to hasten their departure. This reversal shows divine justice: oppressors will ultimately release the oppressed when God acts. Throughout Scripture, God promises to make enemies be at peace with His people when their ways please Him (Proverbs 16:7).
