

Psalms 107:19

Authorized King James Version (KJV)

Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses.

Analysis

This verse repeats the distress-cry-deliverance pattern (cf. vv. 6, 13). 'Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble' shows extremity drives prayer. At death's threshold, they cry out. 'And he saveth them out of their distresses' uses yasha (יָשָׁא), to save or deliver. The pattern's repetition across different scenarios (lost wanderers, imprisoned rebels, sick fools) emphasizes its universality: whatever the specific distress, crying to God brings salvation. This teaches that no situation is beyond God's power to deliver from, and that desperate prayer is the proper response to any extremity.

Historical Context

Scripture records numerous healings when sufferers cried to God: Hezekiah's terminal illness healed (2 Kings 20:1-6), Miriam's leprosy (Numbers 12:13-15), deadly snake bites (Numbers 21:7-9). Jesus' healing ministry demonstrated God's power to save from distresses of sickness. James instructs sick believers to call for elders to pray (James 5:14-15), continuing this pattern of crying to God in sickness.
